Mayor Suppant returned home yesterday, after a week's stay at Shasta, Cal. Yesterday he attached his signature to the ordinance providing for the improvement of Astor street west of Sixth, and on Saturday next the street committee of the council will open bids for the improvement of the thoroughfare.

Adella Leroy, aged 49, was examined before Justice Goodman yesterday and committed to the state hospital. Miss Leroy is feeble-minded and her relatives decided that the state hospital was the proper place for her, the officials having agreed to receive her. She will be taken to Salem by Sheriff Linville today.

Formal orders were handed down yesterday by Judge McBride as follows: Dean Bros. Steam Pump Works vs. Astoria Iron Works, settled and dismissed; Finnish Brotherhood vs. Mary L. Gillette et al, order for condemnation of land; A. L. Knapp vs. Phebe F. Knapp et al, order for condemnation of land.

W. M. Mead, representing the Chicago & Northwestern Railway in Portland, and one of the best-known railroad men on the Pacific Coast, was stricken with paralysis at Spokane, last Monday, and now lies in a very critical condition there, although latest advices report him as improving. The entire lower part of his body is affected.

Fishers' opera house was well filled again last night to witness the Walden company in the great rural drama entitled "A Virginia Romance." The applause was more than liberal, showing the company is pleasing the large audiences by their clever work. Tonight the farce-comedy "The Naughty Kid" will be the bill. Go and have a good laugh. It is better than a dose of medicine.

Chief Engineer Gill, of the dredger Ladd, while at his brother's home in Portland a few days ago, secured an old picture of Astoria, taken in 1884. The picture is very well preserved and is displayed at Trullinger & Eastabrook's cigar store. The city presented a far different appearance in those days than now, and the great changes wrought here can be seen by a glance at the picture. Then, Main (now Ninth) street was the principal business thoroughfare, and but few streets were planked.

The labor situation in Portland is daily growing worse. Now the employees of the Portland City & Oregon Railway Company are on strike, about 125 men refusing to work. The striking wood-workers and building employees are still as far as ever from a settlement with the employers and business is suffering greatly in consequence. The boycott now being placed on Portland manufactured material will have a far-reaching effect, as it will require much time to restore the prestige of the unfair firms, even after the difficulty with the men is settled.

The British ship Speke is still at anchor in the lower harbor and will not go to sea for a few days to come. Captain Stott had much trouble with his men and, although a full crew has been secured, he will not put to sea until a supply of handcuffs is received. Some of the men have appeared troublesome and the captain does not care to take any chances. A sailor boarding-house man said yesterday that the Speke belongs to the firm of Leyland Bros., and that she is one of the hungriest fleet that sails away from the British Isles. The Leyland ships are noted the world over for the poor food furnished the men, and this is largely responsible for the trouble experienced in getting a crew here.

The case of the State of Oregon vs. Louis Kiss was tried in the circuit court yesterday. Kiss was accused of stealing a net, the complaining witness being Peter M. Carasco. Kiss entered a general denial of the crime, saying the net had been found by him and turned over to Sheriff Linville. He was represented by Judge F. D. Winton, while the state's case was looked after by District Attorney Allen. The following jury tried the case: O. B. Wirt, J. C. Reinson, Theodore Estess, Jacob Utzinger, H. A. Comer, J. A. Melrose, Thomas Mitchell, W. H. Walker, W. A. Cole, Thomas Bidwell, James W. Welch and B. F. Allen. Kiss was jointly indicted for larceny with Lyman Way, but the latter has not been taken into custody. At 1 o'clock this morning the jury was still out, and it was evident a verdict would not be reached.

While the jury was out yesterday afternoon in the Kiss case, several attorneys assembled at the circuit court room and related interesting anecdotes of by-gone days. Judge Winton told a good story which goes to prove that even a self-confessed criminal can be cleared if his attorney is up to snuff. A man had been arrested for the theft of a net. He made a full confession to a public official, who took down the man's statement in writing and submitted it to the man for his signature, which was readily obtained. Afterwards, when the case was called for trial, Judge Winton defended the man. He urged the man to enter a plea of guilty, so as to secure the leniency which usually follows, but the defendant declined to do this. The written confession was offered in evidence, but Judge Winton argued before the jury that the man to whom the statement was made was so unreliable that the jurors should not seriously consider any evidence offered by him, and the man was actually acquitted.

The Commercial Club bowling team leaves tonight for Portland, to play a return match with the Portland Commercial Club. The team will be made up of the following bowlers: George W. Ralston, Herman Wise, P. Peterson, J. D. Taylor, B. J. Pye and P. H. Rovey. W. C. Laws, the crack local bowler, will be unable to make the trip. Dr. T. P. Lavin and A. R. Carruthers will accompany the team. Mr. Wise last night received a letter from Secretary Mallory, in which that gentleman says the Portland Commercial Club will be ready for the local team. Mr. Mallory adds: "Your team certainly made a creditable showing in the recent match. That kind of bowling will win every time. The Commercial Club give out the expression of having a glorious time at Astoria, which is what we always hear."

A few days ago, while a ferry boat was crossing San Francisco bay from Alameda, an elderly woman dropped dead of heart failure. Efforts to identify her at first proved unsuccessful, but the following day, Sunday, her husband called at the morgue. The woman proved to be Mrs. H. T. Crosby, formerly a resident of this city. She had left her home at Alameda to join her husband in San Francisco and return with him that night and had been attacked with heart failure, on the trip across the bay. Mrs. Crosby was very well known here, where she had many friends, to whom the news of her death will be a sad surprise. She had been a sufferer from heart failure, but felt so well on Saturday that she determined to visit her husband at his San Francisco office. News of her death was received in Astoria yesterday.

Henry Watterston's "roast" of Grover Cleveland is the principal topic of conversation among the Democrats of Astoria, and surprising interest is manifested in the national political situation with reference to the rehabilitation of the party. The Democrats of this city are almost a unit in upholding the stand taken by Watterston and also taken by Bryan. In discussing the situation, Hon. John H. Smith said yesterday: "Grover Cleveland can never hope to reorganize the Democracy. The Democratic party must be true to the people, and the record of Cleveland is too much against him to permit of him ever again becoming the leader. He represents that political faction known as the Northeastern Democrats, who have always demanded greatly modified political principles, and who have repeatedly stood with the Republicans. It was apparent that the Tilden Club banquet was arranged purely for the purpose of snubbing Bryan, and the late Democratic presidential candidate was justified in expressing himself as he did when he told why he had declined to accept the invitation to attend. If the Grover Cleveland wing of the party should secure control, the fate of the Democracy would indeed be sealed. It is my idea that Bryan and Cleveland hold the same relative position in the Democratic party that Roosevelt and Hanna hold in the Republican party, and while I am extremely anxious for harmony and rehabilitation, I am not that anxious that I would surrender the organization to Cleveland and his friends."

MISS SATER SUCCESSFUL

Was Elected Goddess of Liberty After an Exciting Race.

Miss Mollie Sater ..... 2465

Miss Cordelia Thiel ..... 1873

Miss Sater's majority ..... 592

Miss Mollie Sater has been elected Goddess of Liberty by a plurality over Miss Cordelia Thiel, the nearest competitor, of 592 votes. The final count was made by the Fourth of July committee yesterday afternoon and the result of the balloting proved pretty much of a surprise. The other candidates, among the most formidable of whom were Miss Birdie Gunderson and Miss Lottie Reed, did not show the final strength that was expected of them, and the race was between Miss Sater and Miss Thiel.

Yesterday the friends of the two leading candidates hustled hard for their favorites, and nothing was left undone to insure success. It was a reasonable conclusion that 1973 votes would be sufficient for the election of a candidate, but Miss Sater's friends made sure and cast more than 2400 votes for her. The heavy balloting was done at Hoefler's and Fisher Bros.' The surprise was that the other candidates were not voted for, only a few scattering votes being cast for them. Miss Thiel's friends made a fine campaign and the election of Miss Sater in no way reflects on their loyalty. The Fourth of July committee realizes a very neat sum from the contest.

WEDDING BELLS.

A very pretty marriage ceremony occurred last evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Belknap at Knappa, the happy participants being Miss Alice Lenore Warren, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Belknap, and Mr. August McDonald, of Nelhart, Montana. Rev. Mr. Foeter, of Knappa, officiating. The rooms were most tastefully decorated with garlands of white roses, and were filled with relatives and friends. The bride looked charming in a dainty gown of cream silk organdy. Delicious refreshments were served. The bride is a niece of Mr. D. K. Warren, and is very popular in Knappa social life. Mr. McDonald is a young mining man of Nelhart, Montana, for which place the happy couple will leave by this morning's train.
